71         <firstletter>F</firstletter>all is a time to rejoice the cycle of life coming to an end in nature
72         and the anticipation of new life. Leaves fall with the hope of new ones 73         soon to take their place. The weather is cool and comfortable. The type 74         of weather to be able to blissfully work in the yard trimming trees, raking 75         leaves, and doing minor repairs to the exterior of the house. You chat with 76         the neighbors as you lean on your rake. You are comfortable - neither too 77         hot or too cold. You take a walk and feel the crunch of leaves under your 78         sneakers. You contemplate if the coming winter will be a bad or mild one 79         but for now you enjoy the coolness of the air and the wonderful autumn 80         colors surrounding you.

102         our homes and venture outside to shovel out our vehicles and shovel paths 103         to the street and to the mailbox. Our arms ache, our cheeks are cold, our 105         in the snow and our children building a snow fort and we remember what 106         we love about winter - the pureness of the snow, the romping in the snow, 107         the quietness and cleanliness of the new fallen snow, the crispness in
